

Programming in Python - C996 : Web Scraping

In this project we will show how to extract data from the US Census Bureau website, and populates it into a CSV file format as absolute uniform resource indicators.

A. How to extract the web links from the HTML

In order to successfully grab the web links from the HTML, Python will be used in correlation with the BeautifulSoup library, and also Requests library. The first thing that we will need to do is to import the BeautifulSoup library. After doing so, it was decided to parse the html as necessary. It was also found useful to use Regular Expressions for this task so the library re will be imported as well.

In [8]: # import import re
import requests
from bs4 import BeautifulSoup as soup
```

Upon doing so, rather than being concerned of any legal issues with the website, it was decided to grab the html data from the site and placing it into a string as seen below:

In [9]: html_string = """

B. Determining if a link is a locator to another HTML page

From here, we can use this in order to grab all of the web links within the page. This can be done using a simple for loop as seen below. We are going to call the `findAll` function and grab all the `'a'` elements with the attribute of `'href'`. This is to ensure that we grab the data of our interest which are the hyperlinks within the webpage. It also uses our regular expression module that we imported earlier in order to grab all URL's, including those of relative and absolute types, being why we are using in the last section of the regex, an `'/'` symbol. This grabs all relative URL's from the site. We are also going ahead and using pandas in order to create a `DataFrame object` in order to store the URLs into. It will be seen later why it has been chosen to do this as opposed to a simple array.

```
In [23]: import numpy as np
import pandas as pd
from pandas import Series, DataFrame

data = []
for site in ps.findAll('a', attrs={'href': re.compile("(http*|/.)")}):

    link = site.get('href').strip()

    if link.startswith("/") :
        data.append('https://www.census.gov' + link)
    elif link.endswith('/') :
        data.append(link[:-1])
    else :
        data.append(link)

#Creating a pandas dataframe in order to store all of our data.
links = pd.DataFrame({
    'Links' : data,
})
print(links)

C. Where are the relative URLs that you speak of?

The relative URLs are not shown above because within the for loop above, it was converted to already be in absolute URL format. This was done in row 9 above: "`data.append('https://www.census.gov' + site.get('href').strip())`" This was done within this loop to be more efficient as opposed to calling an iteration through our dataframe a second time. This ensures that we keep all of our URLs in absolute form for better convenience as to when we want to access them later from our output file instead of getting them directly from the website. The inclusion of strip() is also used in the case of there being any leading or trailing whitespaces that are not necessary to have in the URL. You may also wonder why we are using a DataFrame object to store our links. This is because of our next step, Removal of all duplicate links.

D. How do we ensure there are no duplicated links in our table?

The next step will be ensuring that none of the links in our table are duplicated. To do so, one thing that has already been performed starting in line 15 above: "`elif link.endswith('/') : "`. This if statement performs the following check to see if the URL grabbed ends with an '/' symbol, and then removes it "`data.append(link[:-1])`". The reason for this is in the circumstance of a URL having the same address as one of the others grabbed, but with just an extra '/' appended to the end of it, of which would make it not be recognized as a duplicate when performing the following below:

In [24]: links.duplicated('Links')
```

```
Out[24]: 0      False
          1      False
          2      False

          7      False
          8      False
          9      False
         10      False
         11      False

         24      False
         25      False
         26      False
         27      False
         28      False
         29      False
          ...
        186      True
        187      False
        188      False
        189      False
        190      True
        191      False
        192      False
        193      False
        194      False
        195      False
        196      False
        197      False
        198      False
        199      True
        200      True
        201      False
        202      False
        203      False
        204      False
        205      False
        206      False
        207      False
        208      True
        209      False
        210      False
        211      True
```

```
212     False
213     False
214     False
215     False
Length: 216, dtype: bool
```

As you can see, this function returns a boolean. It returns either true or false. If true, then that means a duplicate link has been located. Otherwise, they are unique. We can then perform the following function below: drop_duplicates, and this will remove any duplicate address that was found in the DataFrame.

```
In [25]: links = links.drop_duplicates("Links")
         print(links)
```

You can see that the duplicates have been removed by referring to the column without a name, of which is the key column help to identify the items in the DataFrame object.

Now that this has been performed, we can move on to the next step and extract the unique links that point to other HTML pages.

E. Exporting unique addresses to outer sites to an CSV file.

Since we now have all unique addresses in our DataFrame object, it is now time to write it out to a CSV file. This can be done simply with the following code below:

```
In [26]: links.to_csv('C:_Projects\programming_in_python_C996\Links_Part_G.csv')

If you are using a Windows machine and are to run this script, you will see that the CSV file has been created in the following directory listed above.

This then concludes scraping the web links from the website given and we have successfully outputted our csv file. Below you will find the full script in its entirety as opposed to having multiple sections in between for your observation. After that, you will find the resources studied in order to successfully perform the following task.

H. Entire script and sucessfully executed results as a whole.
